(57) Abstract :

The present invention provides a novel method for improving the fertility of a soil from Konkan region of Maharashtra state, India using cow dung, cow urine, plant material ash and some of the plant material. The ability of a soil to support plant growth by offering vital plant nutrients and favorable chemical, physical, and biological properties as a habitat for plant growth is known as soil fertility. The current invention of improving the soil fertility decreases the requirement for high inputs like chemical fertilizers, restores soil fertility, improves soil profiles and physical state, protect against diseases or pathogens and increases greater agricultural production in both quantitative and qualitative parameters. Plants materials used in the present invention includes leaves of Wild Banana botanically known as Ensete superbum (Roxb.) Cheesman belonging to family Musaceae, Leaves of Ain botanically known as Terminalia paniculata Roth, belonging to family Combretaceae, Fruits of Bor botanically known as Ziziphus mauritiana Lam. belonging to family Rhamnaceae and Fruits of Kaju botanically known as Anacardium occidentale L. belonging to family Anacardiaceae. Plant material ash other than plant materials mentioned in above, cow dung and cow urine are other ingredients used in an invention.

To,

The Principal,

J S M College, Alibag

Dear Madam / Sir,

National Science Day is being celebrated in our country on 28, February every year in commemoration of Sir C. V. Raman's discovery of the Raman Effect. The theme for National Science Day 2024 is "Indigenous Technologies for Viksit Bharat".

Indian Institute of Geomagnetism is a premier autonomous research Institute under Department of Science and Technology, Government of India. Magnetic observatory, Alibag is a prime observatory established in 1904 as a successor to Colaba Magnetic observatory.

It will put on display its own scientific achievements and pioneering work being carried on in the field of Geomagnetism and allied fields. Demonstration of scientific instruments, presentations will be arranged for students and teachers on 28th February, 2024.

We wholeheartedly extend our invitation to the students and teachers of your school/college to attend the event.

We look forward to your active participation in making this event successful.

GEOMAGNETIC FIELDS – SOURCES AND VARIATIONS

The major contribution towards earth's magnetic field is by:

1. Earth's Core: Due to the flow of highly conductive liquids.
2. Earth's Crust: The minerals which are magnetic in nature like iron cobalt nickel are the sources of this magnetic in nature and currents that flow there contribute to the geomagnetic field.
3. Earth's Atmosphere(Ionosphere): Due to incident of high energy rays from sun excites upper part of atmosphere and due to that some charged particle are created. This flow of these charged particle result in current which in-turn produce magnetic field.

Earth's Core:

The magnetic field of Earth is due to highly conductive fluids in core. The motion of the liquid in the outer core is driven by heat flow from the inner core, which is about 6,000 K. The pattern of flow is organized by the rotation of the Earth and the presence of the solid inner core.

- The free particle inside earth will be in motion due to high temperature. These charges in motion create current. This current will in-turn produce magnetic field. As the movement of charges are not in general uniform the magnetic field produced will vary with time this will again produce current. This will exert force of charged particle and hence making the particle to move in a steady way- a constant magnetic field.
- This value of earth's magnetic field will vary from $25\mu\text{T}$ to $40\mu\text{T}$.

Earth's Crust:

On shorter scales, the main contribution comes from magnetized rocks and is known as lithospheric or crustal field. The contribution of this field generally come up to hundreds of nT.

Variations:

The geomagnetic field changes on time scales from milliseconds to millions of years. Shorter time scales mostly arise from currents in the ionosphere and magnetosphere. Changes over time scales of a year or more mostly reflect changes in the Earth's interior particularly the iron-rich core. These changes are referred to as secular variation.

Generally the geomagnetic variation follow a 24 hour cycle:

Ionosphere:

The ionosphere is a region of Earth's upper atmosphere, from about 60 km (37 mi) to 1,000 km (620 mi) altitude. It is distinguished because it is ionized by solar radiation.

The third contribution of geomagnetic field is external in origin. The electrical current systems in ionosphere and magnetosphere vary rapidly, depending on solar activity. The contribution of this region on average around 20nT. A detailed knowledge of the near-Earth magnetic environment is crucial in so-called "space weather" studies. We here in IIG study mainly about this magnetic field.

Components Of Earth's Magnetic Field:

Although a compass points generally to the north and south, careful examination reveals that the north indicated on a compass (magnetic north) differs from the "north" in the geographical sense (true north, as determined by observing the positions of the sun or other stars). The difference is known as geomagnetic declination. Besides, the angle between the geomagnetic field and the horizontal plane is known as geomagnetic inclination.
